Move Everything to a New Phone

This guide shows how to move apps, photos, and settings to a new phone, using Quick Start on iPhone or Copy apps & data on Android, instead of setting everything up from scratch.

Why it's worth doing right

A new phone doesn't have to mean starting completely over.

No retyping everything
Apps, Wi-Fi passwords, and photos come along automatically.

Most apps sign you right back in You're already signed into your Google or Apple account.

A backup makes this possible
This only works smoothly if the old phone was backed up first.

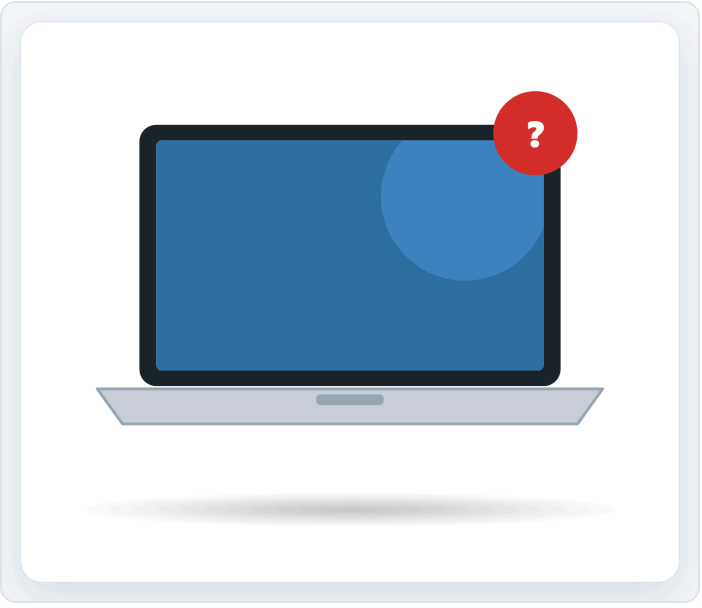

Step by step

MOVE TO A NEW PHONE

Got a new phone?

You don't have to start from zero. Moving almost everything takes minutes.

WHAT TO DO
We're Naples Computers, helping Naples families with this since 1993.

iPhone: Quick Start

- [ ] Place the new iPhone near the old one
  Quick Start starts automatically

- [ ] Follow the prompts on both screens
  Matching the animation confirms it's really your device
- [ ] Keep both phones charging and nearby
  Until the transfer finishes completely

Android: Copy apps & data

- [ ] Choose Copy apps & data during setup
  When prompted on the new phone
- [ ] Connect with a cable for the best transfer
  The most complete copy of apps, photos, and settings
- [ ] No cable? Use Wi-Fi instead
  Just confirm the matching code on both screens

A few things to know

- [ ] Some apps ask you to sign in again
  That's normal for banking and authenticator apps, done on purpose
- [ ] Keep the old phone for a few days
  Until everything's confirmed working on the new one
- [ ] No old phone? Restore from the cloud iCloud or Google Backup covers most of it instead

Recap: move to a new phone

- [ ] iPhone: Quick Start, place the phones near each other, follow the prompts
- [ ] Android: Copy apps & data, using a cable or Wi-Fi during setup
- [ ] No old phone? Restore from iCloud or Google Backup instead
- [ ] Some apps still need a fresh sign-in, and that's normal

Keep the old phone for a few days after setting up the new one, until you've confirmed everything actually came over.
