Outgrown Your IT Person?

7 signs it might be time for more support.

We Make I.T. Happen!™

1 Repeat Outages Nobody Fully Explains

The same problem keeps coming back because there's never time to fix the real cause.

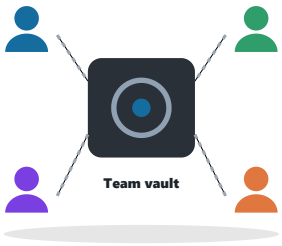

2 Backups That Have Never Been Tested

A backup that's never been restored is a guess, not a safety net.

3 Shared Passwords for Important Accounts

One login, several people, and no record of who did what.

4 No One Owns Updates and Patching

Security updates get applied whenever someone remembers, instead of on a schedule.

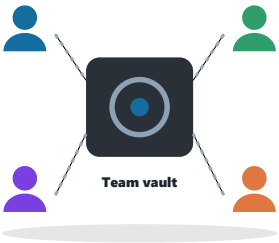

5 IT Requests Pile Up Behind Everything Else

Tickets wait because IT is the fourth or fifth priority on someone else's list.

6 New Hires Wait Days for Working Accounts

Setup is manual and inconsistent, since it's not anyone's main job.

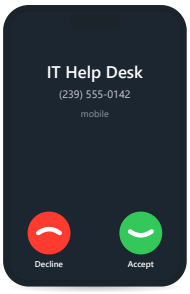

7 Nobody Else Knows How Any of It Works

If that one person is out sick, very little gets fixed until they're back.

Good to Know

- None of these signs are emergencies alone; together, they add up to needing a conversation.
- Co-managed IT works alongside the person you already rely on, not instead of them.
- Wondering if your office has outgrown one person? Call 239-513-1960 for a free assessment.
